Three Missing in 19th Century Colorado —The Lost Children Continues Exciting New Middle Grade Mystery Series

JANUARY 1, 2017: SANTA FE, NM—At a picnic in the mountains in 1891, three children run into the forest to play and are never seen again. More than a hundred years later, Mogi Franklin and his sister, Jennifer, discover a series of clues that bring them to the brink of solving the mystery, only to be thwarted by a resort-building billionaire eager to sacrifice an entire town to build a playground for the rich. (ISBN 978-1-938288-77-7, $14.95, 174 pages, paperback, May 2017)

The Lost Children is a fast-paced blend of mystery and history highlighting author Don Willerton's love of the outdoors and skill in bringing its landscapes to life. The book is published by Terra Nova Books (www.TerraNovaBooks.com), an independent publisher in Santa Fe, New Mexico, whose books are distributed to the trade by SCB Distributors of Gardena, California (800-729-6423).

Don Willerton's favorite activity growing up in a little Texas oil town was climbing a tree in his backyard and imagining himself to be someone important. Since then, life has worked out well enough: He has built his own house, programmed some of the world's fastest computers, backpacked and climbed in the mountains of Colorado, and rafted rivers in four states (including the Colorado through Grand Canyon). Throughout it all, Willerton has remained fascinated with history, enchanted by amazing landscapes, and delighted to create mysteries that involve both. He lives in Los Alamos, New Mexico.
